Dear Sir or Madame,

I personally feel that the Federal Proposal to install reinforced cockpit doors on passenger carrying and some cargo aircrafts that are to be operated by foreign carriers is not only a very good idea, but also very necessary during these times.

After September 11th, we have had to deal with the fact that terrorists are among us. This proposal would not only alleviate part of the problem, but also make passengers like me feel more comfortable and safe while traveling. I had to travel 13 days after September 11th and I feel that I would have been much more at ease if I knew that no one would be able to enter the cockpit. Unfortunately, it will be a necessary tool to safeguard everyone on board, including the pilots. Even before these horrible events, I never felt that anyone should be able to have such easy access to the cockpit.

I think that this proposal should have been set forth many months ago and I also feel that we must think about doing the same for domestic flights.

Yours truly,

Eve Cruz
